THE NATIONAL
ELECTRIC FOOTBALL GAME
MUSEUM™

preserving the buzz...

The Grasamke Collection

Introduction

One of the hardest things to do in collecting ELECTRIC FOOTBALL is accurately identifying and dating figures and teams. There are several references, but the best is “The Unforgettable Buzz”, authored by Earl Shores and Roddy Garcia, and published in 2013. But it mainly covers the period of Tudor Games from 1949 -1989. It does give a brief history of the period of Miggle Toys / Tudor Games, 1991 - 2011 and up until the sale of Miggle Toys to Tudor Games, Inc. in 2012.

It also cover the periods of Gotham (1954 - 1969), Coleco and Munro (the early to mid 70s) and several of the other short-lived makers of electric football games during these time periods.

Other books by Earl Shores and Roddy Garcia included “Full Color Electric Football” (2015) and “The Electric Football Wishbook” (2017).

Fortunately, we do have these references in our library as well as most Tudor Rule Books containing the full-color product pages and several “Tudor Toy Fair” product catalogs from the 1960’s and 1970’s.

It is these references and my personal experiences of collecting since 1997 that these evaluations are based upon.

- Chris LeMay, Founder and Curator, The National ELECTRIC FOOTBALL Game Museum.

The Grasamke Collection

In February 2023 we were contacted by Judy Grasamke of Edina, MN about a collection of teams and various accessories once owned by her husband who had passed away 18 years earlier.

“My husband was a drummer all his life, he loved his electric football. In the early 80's he would go to work and leave me the roster for the team, and I would hand paint the numbers based on each player for that year. He passed away 18 years ago, and I thought it was time to share them with others who would appreciate the game.

I know my husband started collecting when he was younger, in the early 70's. I don't know much about the players or anything else. I just want others to find some joy and fun in the game.”

After an assessment process, we were able to come up with an evaluation of the collection and a purchase price for this collection.

Thanks, Judy, for contacting the museum and giving us the opportunity to acquire this collection.

The Assessment Process

The assessment process used to evaluate this collection was done by careful examination of photos and descriptions provided by Ms. Grasamke.

This is not the preferred way to assess a collection but when there is not the opportunity to examine the items in person, this is an acceptable alternative, if the photos and descriptions offer a good amount of detail.

Fortunately, with this collection, the photos and descriptions we were given did provide a good amount of detail and we were able to give a good “fair market value” assessment and evaluation of these items.

As an example:

Description: Falcons - red jersey - not numbered - slotted bases. Assessed Value: $10.00

Just about any original pre-painted 11- player team with the original packaging has a “worth” of at least $10.

Obviously not very much to go on.

After receiving the item and upon closer examination, this item is determined to be a Miggle Toys / Tudor Games original “Team NFL” FALCONS D 5-14-D 11-player team with 2 Falcons “QB’s of the NFL” figures. Made in China, circa 1994.

Estimated Value: $25.00

By all accounts, this team would appear to be a Haiti-Era team, circa late 1970's with 2 1981 - 82 QBS. They did wear this uniform during the 1973-77 seasons but also as a “throwback” in the 1994 season. The QB's do match that of the 1982 uniforms with the “grey” pants. The bag is what is throwing everything off.

Final Total Collection Estimated Value: $2075 as of April 2023

As with any collectible or collection of things, the value or worth of something is really only the price that someone else is willing to pay at a given time and on a given day.

Electric football is no different.

Over the years prices have changed dramatically as the supply and demand of available vintage game sets, game boards, teams and figures have increased and decreased.

It amazes me at what some of these things are being listed for and selling for today. Do a search for “electric football” on eBay to see some of the current listings now available.

My plans for this collection is to make it a permanent part of the Museum’s collection and to display it as a whole and as is. Those plans may change depending on the financial needs of the Museum and the desire of another individual to purchase some of these items.

Also, periodically I will reassess the value of this collection based on available information and changes in the market.

preserving the buzz...

The National ELECTRIC FOOTBALL Game Museum is a 501 (c)(3) nonprofit organization chartered in the State of Tennessee with the specific purpose of educating the public about the game of Electric Football.

It is largely built around the personal collection of our Founder and Curator, Chris LeMay, but also includes many items received through the generous donations of individuals interested in seeing the history of the game preserved for future generations to enjoy.

Please visit our website (nefgm.org) to learn how you can donate or otherwise support or museum.
